

here i am to share again. i will say that not getting any responses from people makes me think that i am just being a bother and a bore to everyone. i know i can't get to the computer that often now but i love to find there waiting for me your words of love and encouragement. maybe i need to consider not doing these reports as i don't want everyone to think i am drawing on pity from everyone.

we all have our different paths in life. some are plagued by one thing and some by another. the point is that there is something each of us has to overcome. and we overcome by the word of our testimony and the blood of the lamb. i think too often today people forget about the blood and fail to apply it. there is nothing in this world more powerful than His blood. i can imagine that as He died, not one drop of it was soaked into the soil but gathered by the angels to present it before God the Father.

we know so little about our Lord's young life, but i guess it is not needed. as He grew from childhood to manhood, it must have been amazing to behold. was He always aware of His full mission or did the Father reveal it gradually? we know Him now as fully man and fully God. even though He operated as a man, there was never doubt in Himself that His word would be performed as spoken. He knew the world was formed through Him and all things were subject to Him. it is our job to know that now.

friends, we just have to look around and know that it is the time for evil to have it's reign. there is so much hatred, confusion and lawlessness that it can't be denied. the terrible things they are trying to put on our children may be the worse. if a child is struggling with gender confusion, it is because they have nourished it and made them think they can make that decision. schools are indoctrinating them with all manner of perversion. things adults are ashamed to even discuss. God forgive this generation. is it no wonder this generation was chosen to suffer the tribulation?

i am amazed at how the number of confessing christians has fallen in recent years. perhaps this is like the parable of the sower. thorns and persecutions are choking out the word. persecutions are spreading far and wide. i never would have thought i would live to see some of the things now happening in so-called christian nations. it is because they had no root in themselves. God says that in the end times He will send a great delusion on those who would not repent while they could. now is the day of salvation. one must draw near to Him while you can. unless the Holy Spirit is there to convict, there can be no remorse that will be accepted. if one is sorry just because they were caught it doesn't count as true repentance.

often i wish we could make others understand the joy and peace that comes with Jesus. this world quickly loses it's hold we we finally know the scope of His strength and love. i know it can be hard to think of us or a loved one leaving. this world is all we have known throughout our life. to go from the known to the unknown can often be terrifying. but He has delivered us of fear of that journey. we have the blessed hope set before us and if we remain true, no one can snatch us out of His hands.

there's so much more i wish i had done for Jesus. so many have done so much more and we thank God for them. multitude of lives have be changed by them. i remember how mother and i used to watch jan and paul crouch in the evening. even though she wore all that makeup one knew her heart. she would weep for people's needs and just let the mascara run. they have their reward now and their legacy still bears fruit. it is appointed unto man once to die and then the judgment. lying spirits may try to tell us otherwise by confirming dates and places but reincarnation is just another lie of the devil. one lives through no remake to do things better. judgment is at the door when we die.

i have so many shows on my dvr that i'll never catch up. although i have enjoyed a couple of shows, i am watching more and more christian programming. the rest just seems so useless. that and the news i like to keep up on. watched a program the other day about a man and his wife. she had a heart problem when young which they thought was fixed then. shortly after marriage it reappeared. they stood and believed but she died in the end. shortly afterwards healing broke out in the church and many heart problems and other things were healed. who can know the wisdom of God as He weaves all thing together? we must trust and believe. the rest is up to Him. He works all things together for good. praise Him forever.

hope you don't mind receiving these emails. if you are willing. please write. one way communication is often hard even though i admit i like to talk about my Jesus. still, any words of encouragement are so appreciated.

though i like meaty emails, just a short hello means much.
