

i'm finding it difficult to write this. i feel so inadequate to express the depth and extent of the love God has for us. does God weep? Jesus wept more than once in scripture. He wept over those who would not believe. "If you had known, even you, especially in this your day, the things that make for your peace! But now they are hidden from your eyes." luke 19:42 today is your day.

those who will not believe risk having the truth hidden from them. but the prayers and intercession of God's beloved can remove that veil from their eyes. once again they will feel the tugs of the Holy Spirit at their heart. never give up on the hope set before you. you and God are in agreement. Can there be anything stronger? "God is "not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance." 2 peter 3:9

the love of God. who can express its' height and depth and expanse. we only know that "while we were still sinners, Christ died for us." rom 5:8 He did not wait until we were "deemed worthy" of His sacrifice. He saw in each of us all that we could become in Him. what we could become except for the sin that separated us.

God has set no limits on how far He will reach out to the one He sees potential in. of all the books that have been written and the songs that have been sung, none come even close to the love He has for His creation. we were each individually formed and intimately know as He formed us in our mother's womb. even as we are born, God's desire for us is also born in that moment. can the abortion of that creation and potential be more evil? it is perhaps child sacrifice at it's worst. are people even now sacrificing their unborn on the altar of convenience? yet still the mercy and forgiveness of God is not beyond reach.

i remember several years ago when a revival broke out, i think in florida. it was triggered by the song "the mercy seat". it proclaimed "come running to the mercy seat". and come running they did. when one experiences the love and mercy of God, it overwhelms their human spirit. again i acknowledge "the heights, depths and expanse" of His love. His mercy exists in that love. a love none of us can fully experience it's limits in this life.

when one finally becomes aware of their nakedness before Him, they are ashamed. we are ashamed because we are not clothed with His righteousness. there is nothing hidden that will not be revealed. we shall all know that our righteousness is as filthy rags. the hebrew word iddah literally means "the bodily fluids from a woman's menstrual cycle."

the desceitfulness and destructiveness of sin cannot be under rated. it may begin with something simple but once fed, it's hunger grows. grows until it would consume you if not cut off. (His blood can do that.) perhaps a little lie would be justified in one's thinking. do you know what the scripture says about liars? "all liars shall have their part in the lake which burns with fire and brimstone" rev 21:8 truth is emphasized in the scriptures. "God is Spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth." john 4:24

a serial killer may first begin with the torture and killing of animals. when that first begins to bring them pleasure, it then becomes unfulfilling. they are no longer content with animals but desire to go further. to humans then perhaps to child sacrifice when sin has reached it's climax. there is such a darkness in sin that Godly people cannot imagine. some of these deeds that used to be done under the cover of darkness are now being brazenly displayed. the anti-christ that is coming will bring them all into the open.

sin is ugly, deceitful and cruel. even as this "woke" generation will quickly turn and eat their own, sin is purposeful in it's mission. to drive God's creation further and further away. so far that they cannot find their way back in the dark. that is when we all must let our light shine so they may find their way in the dark. whether we literally have to lay down our life, or lay it down in service to Him, lay it down we must. His will must be preeminent in our lives.

when this world (beautiful as it is) has lost it's glow, then perhaps we are ready. i am always envious of the early believers. because they had beheld Him and walked with Him, this world had lost it's glow to them. they only desired Him and to be with Him again. even as their persecutions endured, they sought only to share their wonderful gift with others. the fate of each lies in the balance and that fate is eternity. that's a longtime to dwell in darkness or in His love. may we all rejoice there before our Lord.
