

may 6

good morning to all the lovely people out there who bothered to respond yesterday to my request for a confession of faith.

i don't know why the Lord put this in my spirit to ask, but i was shocked by the results. i'm sure He knew the reaction it would have on me. although i know these messages go to many unbelievers and those of different faiths, i knew there were far more christians and thought they were readers. there were less than ten percent who bothered to respond.

that, along with other signs, cause me to doubt as to whether these dailies are as needed or fruitful as i had lead myself to believe. they do take expenditure of time and effort than might well be directed elsewhere for the kingdom. admittedly, this would leave a hole in my heart, but i know my God would fill it with something more fulfilling.

for that reason, i will be taking some time to prayerfully consider whether my efforts in this area are needed or desired for kingdom work.

Jesus Christ, He is creator of all the universe, time and space. His very being consists of love and goodness. i look around at all the hatred and evil controlling the hearts of many. my fervent prayer is the blinders are removed and they find their way to the light before it is too late. i hope all believers within my reach will join with me in that. let us all discern the signs of the time and know that His return is imminent.

once again i want to make my confession of faith with my whole heart. i confess that Jesus Christ is the son of God and He is my Lord and savior.

i love you all, but no one can love you as much as Jesus does.