

burning daylight

"so teach us to number our days, that we may gain a heart of wisdom." psalms 90:12

there was a movie awhile back with john wayne called "the cowboys." the cowboys were awakened with a cry, "we're burning daylight." there were only so many hours in the day where there was light to accomplish what had to be done. it must be done in the allotted light or it wouldn't get done.

i wonder how many of us now are burning daylight? Jesus knew all things and He knew what needed to be done; and done quickly. "I must work the works of Him who sent Me while it is day; the night is coming when no one can work." john 9:4

the word tells us, "multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision! for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." joel 3:14 there are so many who are just blithely go along, unaware of the fate awaiting them. some believe they will be reincarnated to do it all over again. then there are those who remain quite sure that death is only a release into the vacuum of emptiness; a final rest from all their labors. they will be surprised when they do not awake into the nothingness they seek. you see, the spirit is eternal, from the moment of conception.

i wonder how many of us are questioning whether Jesus really is coming; and coming in a pre-tribulation rapture? i speak for no one but myself, but i will anxiously wait and look for the next "high watch" time for His summoning, and everyday in between.

His delay only means that we have a few more days of daylight to do our jobs; to bring as many as we can into the kingdom. my rapture hopes are more alive than ever. in fact, so alive that i find it difficult to continue writing as though He hadn't come already.

you see, i try to write these dailies a few days ahead of time and schedule them to be sent automatically. that way if something should "come up" or i get too busy, i can remain assured they will be sent out. in fact, one day many will be receiving this email now even though i am already gone. wouldn't that be wonderful? except for one thing. if Jesus has called me home, it means they are still here. now if it was in the rapture that means they are in for a difficult time ahead, a "tribulation" time.

if however, it was my death that summoned me home, i am no less pleased my race is now over and i have joined my Lord. i do so want to be in the rapture, but even more than that, i want to be in His will. just know that i have left teaching and rapture videos explaining what has happened to everyone on my computer and i have many, many bibles in my home to share with others. if it is indeed the beginning of the tribulation, false explanations will abound and bibles will become rarer and rarer.

it doesn't matter if you are "saved through fire" or otherwise - only that you are saved. our precious, beautiful Lord is not willing that any should perish. He's not willing that you should perish, if you happen to still be here. won't you receive Him now as you redeemer, as your Lord and Master, as your God? redemption is only possible through His blood.

our Lord also said, "as the Father has sent Me, I also send you." john 20:21 now spread the good news of Jesus wherever you have opportunity. God bless us everyone.
