

may 13

i see Jesus coming after me

"for the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with the trumpet of God." 1 thes 4:16

look yonder, who do i see could be Jesus coming after me heavens best is yet to be when i see Jesus coming after me and the best is yet to be when i see Jesus come for me when we sing around the throne amazing grace will be our song o look yonder, who do i see could this be Jesus coming after me

heavens best is yet to be
when i see Jesus coming after me i have a vision in my heart. a beautiful vision. it's where God Himself will wipe away every tear i have ever shed - whether from pain, sorrow for self or others, confusion or apprehension; whatever the cause, it shall be remembered no more. (yes, i believe He will even somehow remove the great sorrow from those who will be missing.)

this will only be the beginning; the beginning that has no ending. perhaps we all have thought we have seen love, felt love, even expressed love - but now we shall know what love really is. we shall be once again all that He created us to be; an expression of His glory.

no longer will there be a word for want. jealousy and envy will also pass away. i can hardly ever imagine myself as anywhere but prostrate on my face when beholding Him, but i know the love that redeemed me will lift me up to behold Him; to worship, to admire, and yes, to learn more about Him - to explore the wonders of His person, constantly amazed but never fully satisfied; always wanting more of Him - the quest without ending.

proverbs 29:18 says, "where there is no vision, the people perish." well, i have my vision. do you have yours? by the way, just an interesting thought i had recently. Jesus did His ascension forty days after the resurrection. wouldn't it be great if He lifted us up after forty days also? anyway, i know i will be looking up on may 18th. and i will be looking up ten days later at pentecost. and every day thereafter for that matter. join me in the expectancy.